Textbooks on Reserve

We have textbooks for various courses on reserve at the Library Service Desk. You can find a list—at least during the first part of September—on posters around the GAC. In addition, you can find a list at the Library Service Desk or you can search by course from our online reserve page at <https://tinyurl.com/SUreserves>. Please keep in mind that these are physical textbooks. To comply with federal law, we are not able to circulate access cards for electronic resources that your instructors may require or that came with the textbooks. And we typically only have the main textbook for a course, not the supplementary readings. But if you can't afford the textbook or you find yourself with some time between classes and want to do some work but didn't bring your textbook with you, feel free to check out a textbook on reserve.

Academic Search Ultimate

Thanks to our library consortium, the University System of Maryland and Affiliated Institutions (USMAI), we have been able to upgrade one of our most commonly-used databases, Academic Search Complete, to Academic Search Ultimate. Ultimate has more than 9,000 full-text journals, 53% more than Complete. These cover the full range of academic disciplines from accounting to zoology. The general search function on the SU Libraries website searches Ultimate, or you can find it on the A to Z Database List.

Did You Know? SU yearbooks from 1926 to 2005, the student newspaper from 1926 to 1973, and convocation and commencement programs are available online at SOAR@SU, our institutional repository? You also will find honors and masters' theses and the dissertations and projects produced by recent doctoral graduates. The URL is mdsoar.org/handle/11603/9.
