PRINTING

Just a reminder that printers are available in various locations around the GAC, including at least one on every floor. There are two groups of printers on the first floor—one group by the carillon tower entrance and another by the MakerLab. When you send a job to the GAC printers, your job will be available for release at any of the printers.

GAC hours changing

The Guerrieri Academic Commons will be open on a different schedule than last year. The building and (once we hire and train student workers) the Library Service Desk will be open until 2 a.m. Sunday through Thursday nights. At 2 a.m., the entire building will close. Given the low use after 2 a.m.—see the chart below—and other security needs across campus, there will be no space open 24/5. We will, however, be open 24/7 during the last week of classes and final exam week. And, in case you were wondering, we are open the second-most hours of any public university library in Maryland.

Restrooms in the GAC

Well, you're in one now, so you obviously know we have them. There are men's and women's restrooms on the east (Rte. 13) end of each floor, plus two all-gender restrooms on the second floor of the Café. And if you have a baby or toddler in tow who needs a diaper change, we have baby-changing stations in both all-gender restrooms and the far stall in each of the first-floor restrooms.

Did You Know? In 1887, Massachusetts became the first state to require that “whenever male and female persons are employed in the same factory or workshop, a sufficient number of separate and distinct water-closets, earth-closets or privies shall be provided for the use of each sex and shall be plainly designated.” You can read about this and other “toilet laws” in HeinOnline, a legal database available in our online A-to-Z database list.
